Area of Emphasis

Melissa Rounds is senior counsel in the Energy and Natural Resources Group of Babst Calland. She has represented clients in the oil and gas industry for more than 15 years and has assisted producers in a variety of transactional matters, including real estate closings, preparation of documents for leasing purposes and examining and certifying title. Her work includes resolving complex title defects, coordinating urgent title projects, working in-house with major energy producers to provide comprehensive lease analysis and assistance with mineral purchases, and providing legal analysis for changes in statutory and case law.

Mrs. Rounds' work on behalf of the oil and gas community is primarily focused in Morgantown, West Virginia. Her representation in the Morgantown area includes working with operators to reach drilling commitments, and interactions with county officials in major producing counties in northcentral West Virginia.

Mrs. Rounds is a strong advocate for the oil and gas industry and provides efficient and comprehensive assistance to energy clients to help them achieve their goals.

Background

Mrs. Rounds graduated magna cum laude from the University of Mount Union in Alliance, Ohio, in 2003, where she received her Bachelor of Arts with Honors in Political Science with minors in Music Performance and Legal Studies.
